

How My Ex-Girlfriend Thinks

Jonathan Barr

I know I said not to get close to me, and that I don't like phone calls lasting for endless hours, but I'm not irrational and unaccountable, so it's your fault I don't know you well. So I just sat quietly, giving one-word answers and looking away, until you guessed what was wrong and did the opposite of what I had asked you to do. It's because I don't know what I really want. I was also getting tired of going to all the places you go and meeting all the people you know, even though I had nothing before that.
