

Rivers

Thérèse Ferreria

My eyes
like rivers
were aware of your indifference Whether placid or flowing their salt paths
etched my memory

Notice me
Notice me

For I am in full bloom
and ripe
then brown...

fluid
in your glassblower's hands now brittle
and bitter.

Shattered by you,
I cut myself.