

Melanie Scherencel Bockmann

Holes

How dare you
show your face
in so many of my memories?

I don't want to see you
hear you
talk to you
touch you
or taste you
anymore.

I want to cut you
out of each memory
with sharp, pointed scissors.

But then all I'd have left are holes.