Woman
wasn’t built in a day
though some would say
she couldn’t wait
to build and burn
to bleed and heal
stabbing holes in the ground letting earth
fall between her raised brown fingers into her hair
into her eyes
into her skin
to color herself

Quick!
To the marina
your brothers and fathers and lovers are leaving
taking your flowers...

Withered petals
fall from their fingers
fragrance wafting
drifting...
miscarried
from the motherland
into the stark, bloodless world—

seedless plain
    heedless pain
    travelers in vain...

men hunched against the wall
in the dance hall
celebrating
nothing.
